- Cominform sympathizers in Yugoslavia are said to have received instructions to make their way to Hungary, if they find it possible to escape from Yugoslavia. However, since the Hungarian-Yugoslav border is very strictly guarded, a channel for refugees escaping to Hungary via Austria has been organized in Carinthia by Austrian supporters of the Cominform. The assembly centre is at Fürnitz (C 87), where a refugee camp serves as a transit base. The refugees, among whom there are alleged to be many Yugoslav Army officers, are equipped with suitable personal papers and assisted in reaching Pecs, the Hungarian assembly point.
- 2. It is further reported that a "brigade" of Yugoslav Cominformists is being formed in Hungary. The headquarters of this unit was formerly in Pecs, but has been moved to Siklos (B 30). The men are under the command of a Major Jovanovic, and wear Soviet uniforms with Yugoslav Army insignia. Small groups from this "brigade" are dispatched, upon Soviet order, for operations in Yugoslavia; upon completion of their assignments they return to headquarters.
- 3. Persons of other nationalities are likewise being organized into "brigades" in Siklos, among them many former participants in the Greek guerrilla campaign.* The majority of the commanding officers and instructors in the units are reported to be Russians.
